

History of Huron Chapel

- In 1969, Mr. Dave Rolston (member of the Christian Men's Association) approached several individuals and obtained the $500.00 necessary to purchase the old Presbyterian Church in Auburn. For many years after that, they would hold regular Sunday night services, each year, drawing more and more people.
- With this growth, it was apparent that a "full time" pastor was needed, and for several years after that, Rev. Ron Curl filled this position, dividing his time between Huron Chapel and another church in the area.
- In 1978, Rev. Wayne Good accepted the call to Huron Chapel and on April 20th, 1980 Huron Chapel became a member of the Evangelical Missionary Church of Canada. On this Sunday, 15 charter members joined the newly formed Huron Chapel Missionary Church, some of which are still with us today.
- In April 1999, land was purchased and in August of 2001 construction began, fulfilling a vision that started over a decade earlier. In Sept. 2002, the old church was sold and Huron Chapel was now meeting in the new building, though not yet in the main sanctuary.
- Finally, on Easter Sunday 2003, the church family joyfully gathered together for worship in the new sanctuary, and on Oct.5th, 2003, Huron Chapel Evangelical Missionary Church had its official opening and dedication.
- From the time the construction period had commenced in August 2001, it was estimated that over 20,000 volunteer hours had gone into building the new facility.
